Preventable Tragedies Tracker: A Log of Systemic Failure

154 Tragedies. 79 Lives Lost. One Broken System.

The Evidence: The following log documents a recurring pattern of tragedies across Massachusetts where the "Standard of Neglect" has replaced medical accountability. These cases represent the high human cost of the 911 Gap, where individuals with known histories of Severe Mental Illness (SMI) cycle through ERs and jails without receiving stabilized care.

2026 TRAGEDIES

- September 21 | Andrew Steele (62) of Port Townsend, Washington vandalized the Brockton Court House writing the words “Lives Harmed Here” across the building. He called police and reported what he had done. Steele reports that the court handled his divorce more than 20 years ago and it “ruined his career as a builder”. He had been involved in multiple incidents at the courthouse in 2009 and 2023. Steele was sent to Bridgewater State Hospital for an evaluation.
- September 8 | Gary Phillipo (46) of Carver, attacked a man, unprovoked while parked at a gas station calling him racial slurs. He kicked and hit the victim several times. Police reported that Phillipo told them he has mental health issues, and learned he has a long history of violence.
- August 31 | Jose Nascimento (59) of New Bedford, allegedly attacked a priest with a beer can after reports of erratic behavior. He was sent for a mental health evaluation when he erupted yelling obscenities during his arraignment.
- August 22 | Matthew Sweeney (21) of Paxton, faces two counts of motor vehicle homicide after crashing into a car killing a father and his 8 year old daughter in North Reading. His attorney reported he has a history of mental illness and stopped taking his medication. Sweeney was ordered to undergo a mental health evaluation.
- July 22 | Ashlie Jeremie (27) of Bedford, allegedly killed a man near the Boylston MBTA station and hours later attacked a BU student with a metal pole. Reports indicate Jeremie has a history of bipolar 1 disorder with psychotic features and was recently released on bail for attempting to bring a firearm into a federal building.
